THESE IS serious revolution in Brazil, Pernambuco taken by the rebels, according to report. The Argentine rioting leaders are being 75,000 "reds" attack Buenos Aires. The peaceful south German is rocked by earthquake. Brazil's beautiful Madonna, in Bahia, with the exquisite little statue looking upward, must have been the quake, but fortunately was not hurt. It is a strange, agitated, restless world. We have our share of the trouble here is proved in the fighting and fighting in the streets of Boston, where police and members of the American Legion. It is enlightening in our day of "democracy" to read that the fight against a federal agent in the streets with four bootleggers who were whisky to the crowd, and...

WHEN YOU ARE ILL it is well to know what is the matter. Business is ill, with an illness that affects millions of unemployed, as the body affects billions of people.

Mr. L. Greenfield, of Santa Barbara, diagnosing, finds the following symptoms:
1. Interpersecution.
2. Fear.
3. Loss of confidence in our financial system.
4. Very low and cautious circulation of money.
5. Increase of unemployment.
6. Increase of business methods of "economizing."
7. False statements of the country's condition.

What would you add to these symptoms? There is something the matter that nobody understands. The country fortunately will cure itself this time as it has cured itself often before.

IT SEEMS STRANGE to read in dispatches from Washington about the "type of submarine that the navy may build under the London treaty."

We couldn't imagine Grover Cleveland or Lincoln asking anybody in London: "What kind of submarines may we build and how many?"

Yes, we are told that we may have six years hence, as many as 40 United States submarines, and the navy is "concentrating on numbers, not on size."

We ought to have 100 submarines NOW! And we should concentrate on size, speed, and especially on cruising radius.

WE SHOULD SAY to the rest of the world: "We want peace, and we intend to have it. Therefore, we have a submarine fleet that can go around the world, invisible, and destroy every one of your commercial ships."

"We have an air fleet that can cross all the oceans above the range of your anti-aircraft guns, and destroy every one of your ships. If, to our regret, we find it necessary to do so."

2 FLIERS HOP OFF ON TRIP OVER ATLANTIC

Boyd and Connor Start from New Foundland, Headed for England.

AFTER 2 WEEKS' WAIT

Ride in Columbia, Plane That Made Former Cross Sea Flight.

By The Associated Press

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., Oct. 9

—Captain Errol Boyd and Lieutenant Harry Connor hopped off at 11:20 a. m. (Marion time) in the airplane Columbia, for England.

The two fliers had been bound at the local airport for more than two weeks. Early today for still hung over the New Foundland coast but, impatient at the delay, they prepared to take advantage of the first break in the weather.

It came during the forenoon when the clouds broke away and the fliers decided to take the leap immediately.

The veteran monoplane Columbia essayed her second trans-Atlantic crossing when she put out over the Atlantic ocean today from Harbor Grace, with Captain Boyd at the controls and Lieutenant Connor as navigator.

The ship, which belongs to Charles A. Levine, is the vessel in which Clarence Chamberlin and Levine flew across the Atlantic from Roosevelt field to Kottbus, Germany, in June, 1927.

Since then it has carried Mabel Boll to Havana, it picked up at the take-off of a projected flight to Rome, and was damaged in a flight which Levine made over Roosevelt field.

Exceptional Record

No other plane still in rigorous service has, perhaps, the sturdy record of the Columbia.

Captain Boyd, in command of today's flight, began last spring to prepare for the trip. He hoped at first to start from Montreal in the latter part of May or early June.

First Canadian to enlist in the Royal air force during the World war, Boyd had flown the mail for several years. He selected Connor, who navigated the plane in which Roger Q. Williams recently flew to Bermuda, as his navigator.

From late August, when Boyd finally got ready for his ocean hop, until today, the project had been combated by misfortune in getting under way.

He reached Montreal in September from Toronto and found the plane under seizure at St. Hubert Airport under a warrant obtained at the instance of Roger Q. Williams, who insisted that it be detained for a debt he alleged was owed him.

While legal entanglements delayed the flight, Captain Boyd decided to break at Harbor Grace what was to have been a non-stop flight from St. Hubert to Croydon airdrome.

Finally Settled

Finally on September 11 the plane was set free in court, and two days later Boyd and Connor got away for St. Hubert.

But later that day—Sept. 13—the plane was forced down in a farm-er's field at Charlottetown, on Prince Edward Island, 500 air miles from its Harbor Grace goal, by fog and bad weather, and for ten days the plane was landbound.

Finally, on Sept. 23, it got on its way again, and today it is on its way to England.

The Columbia carries no radio equipment on her flight over the Atlantic, but is equipped with a delicate instrument which Captain Boyd declared will make flying safer through fog.

Passengers and Crew Saved; Fear All of Cargo Lost.

By The Associated Press

MARIETTA, O., Oct. 9—The Steamer Senator Cordill, the largest packet boat in the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati trade, struck at 10:30 p. m. in the Ohio river channel near Marietta, and sank at noon today.

The Cordill was enroute to Pittsburgh from Cincinnati with a heavy freight cargo, but a small passenger list. All passengers and the crew were landed without injury.

The craft was beached on the Ohio side of the river. More than three and a half feet of water was in the engine room and over the main deck, and she was reported settling rapidly.

Divers have been summoned from Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., in an effort to save the steamer, which was valued at $20,000. The ship's officers said the cargo probably would be a total loss.

LEGION FACES LIVELY CONVENTION WIND-UP

Compensation Proposal, Prohibition and Election on Closing Program.

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 9—A stubborn fight loomed in the American Legion convention today, in a form of a proposed recommendation to congress to pass legislation allowing war veterans to cash 80 per cent of their adjusted compensation, thus throwing into circulation about $2,000,000,000 to relieve the present depression.

The legislative committee fought over the question in committee yesterday and the meeting ended with Massachusetts and 11 other states favoring the measure. Eight states recorded themselves as opposed.

The American Legion has one of the two biggest problems of its 1930 convention off its chest by the selection of Detroit for its 1931 meeting, and today it settles the second by choosing a successor to National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer.

That is the principal business remaining before the Legionnaires can strike tent and wind up their twelfth annual convention.

There were, however, other matters of considerable importance awaiting the attention of the delegates. These included an anticipated attempt by the New York state delegation to place the organization on record against prohibition, discussion of the report of the committee on rehabilitation and the naming of minor officers.

Earlier in the session the delegates had unanimously adopted a resolution calling upon congress for a sweeping investigation of Communism and the enactment of suitable legislation to suppress it.

The choice of a successor to Commander Bodenhamer seemed to revolve around five men. They were: Frank J. Schneller, of Wisconsin; Ralph T. O'Neil, of Kansas; E. T. Rozwell, of Virginia; Munroe Johnson, of South Carolina; and Emmet O'Neal of Kentucky. Since no national commander can succeed himself, Bodenhamer is not a candidate.

First Woman Presides Over State Department

By United Press

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 9—Miss Alice Lee Grosjean, Gov. Huey P. Long's young and pretty private secretary, presided over the department of state today as Louisiana's first woman to hold that position.

Miss Grosjean's elevation to an office in his cabinet was announced by the governor yesterday, a few hours after the death of James J. Bailey, who was serving his fourth terms.

Persons who will not be in the city Friday or Saturday between the hours of 1 to 9 p. m. may register at the board of elections office today or on Friday or Saturday mornings. It is pointed out. About 75 voters have taken advantage of this opportunity.

City school children have been urged to remind their parents to register because of the three-mill school levy which will come before the electorate on Nov. 4. The request has been made through teachers by Superintendent George A. Bowman.

Two registrar judges will be in charge of each of the 42 precinct booths in the city Friday and Saturday. The task of registration requires but two minutes, thereby enabling judges to register as many as 30 per hour.

Board of elections officials urge, however, that citizens register early in order to avoid last-minute rushes.

All voters in the city who did not register last Thursday must do so Friday or Saturday to be eligible to vote Nov. 4.

Cooking School Instructor Will Aid Housewives

Why does my cake fall? What is wrong with my pie crust? Why doesn't the icing on my cake stay creamy? These are only a few of the many perplexing questions which Mrs. Emily M. Lautz receives day after day in her question box, and she invites guests at the Star's annual cooking school party next week to repeat them or ask any others which are puzzling a bug-in their culinary duties.

The cooking school, which will be held Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons of next week in the Star auditorium, will begin promptly at 2 p. m. and will be preceded by a half-hour musical program.

The doors will be open at 1 p. m. The nursery will be in charge of Mrs. G. E. Woodell and her assistants.

The stage setting will include a modern kitchen for the demonstration, and explanation of many practical recipes and there will be many simple explanations of time and labor saving devices. Handy kitchen utensils will be used to make the preparation of ordinary as well as unusual dishes a delight.

There will be no cut and dried procedure for handling the various phases of each day's program. The demonstrations will be informal and conducted in an interesting manner. The various stage equipments will be explained as they are used.

A liberal use of the pencil and notebook is urged by Mrs. Lautz who uses every minute of her time on the stage to a good advantage. Visitors will be provided with programs for each day's session but pencils and paper will be required to keep notes on all the timely hints and labor-saving tricks which will supplement Mrs. Lautz' talks and demonstrations.

Friday night's meeting will be the first of a series of get-together meetings for members and their friends, Donithen said today. Reservations must be made by noon Friday.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9—The break-out last night in St. Ignace's Polish Catholic church, while 200 worshippers were attending services there, was averted by the priest.

It was reported that a bomb had been thrown into the church, but the priest, Rev. Fr. Theodosius, said that the bomb was a hoax.

BRAZIL ARMY OPENS ATTACK ON INSURGENTS

Sanguinary Conflict in Sight as Federal Forces Launch Offensive.

REBELS MAKING GAINS

Rush Troops to Sao Paulo and Parana, Where Battle Is Imminent.

By The Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 9—Federal army forces, based on the strategic port of Florianopolis, in the state of Santa Catharina, today launched an offensive against the revolutionary forces in that state.

Gen. Costa, federal army leader, notified officials in the state of Sao Paulo that a force of 2,500 federal cavalrymen had taken the field. This force was divided in five regiments of 500 men each.

While reports came from Recife, or Pernambuco, that a rebel army was advancing down the coast and had overrun the state of Alagoas, the government designated General Santa Cruz as head of all loyal troops in Bahia, between Rio de Janeiro and Pernambuco with orders to conduct an offensive against the northern states from there.

The insurgent army, it is understood here, is headed by General Captain Jureta Tobora, and contains contingents from all three states, including those troops victorious in the week-end battle which wrested Pernambuco from hands of the garrison there. Eutonio Colimbe, deposed president of the province, is expected to arrive in Bahia shortly aboard the liner Aratimo.

Acting to preserve its food supply, government forces have continued an advance into the state of Minas Geraes, whence most of the capital's food supply comes.

BELIEVE BATTLE NEAR

Insurgent Troops Rushed to Border of Parana and Sao Paulo.

By The Associated Press

MONTVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 9—Brazilian revolutionary troops were rushed today to the border of the states of Parana and Sao Paulo, where a battle with defending federal forces was imminent.

Two regiments of cavalry and artillery, accompanied by considerable reserves, and 800 volunteers organized into a military brigade which have left Santa Anna do Livramento, had Castro, in the state of Parana, on their destination.

Revolutionary quarters referring to Castro, which is about 75 miles from the border of Sao Paulo and Parana, said in a message here that "a very bloody battle" possibly would be fought there.

Insurgent troops already in the battle area, who probably will bear the brunt of any early fighting, are under the command of the chief of the federal forces.

In Rio Grande do Sul, both of the revolution, and in Parana and Santa Catharina, adjoining states almost every hamlet is furnishing its quota of volunteers to aid in the advance on Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro.

September Turns Out To Be Fire The Furnace Month

September! School opened, fans began laying bets on the outcome of the football games soon to be played, and the weather brought orders to the coal dealers.

Some days at the beginning of the month were warm and people were loath to think that it could ever grow cold and desolate, but no higher than 69 in the last three days of the month, they began to lay plans for the winter and become reconciled to heavy coats, hats and gloves.

Despite the fact that the temperature fell as low as 33, housewives hesitated to cover their porches and start the furnaces, but they finally acknowledged defeat toward the end of the month and hid hubby to the basement to begin the long winter grind of furnace-firing.

The deadliest frost in the history of Marion county, for so early in the season was on Sept. 14, 1902. The lowest temperature for Marion county in September was in 1899 when the thermometer fell to 20, two degrees below a killing frost temperature. In 1897 it fell to 31. Oddly, too, in 1899 there was a registered heat of 100 degrees, and the same temperature was registered in

Try Magnesia For Indigestion

People who suffer from indigestion usually have tried pepin, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and got little more than slight temporary relief—sometimes not even that.

But before giving up to chronic dyspepsia, just try the effect of a little Bisurated Magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate or milk, but pure Bisurated Magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powder or tablet form.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or four tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment, and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy, lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat. You can enjoy your meals without a fear of indigestion.—Adv.

REMAINS OF VILLAGE SOLD BY AUCTIONEER

Once Prosperous Hickman, Ill. Goes Under Hammer
for $1,039.

The Associated Press
WISCONSIN, Ill., Oct. 8.—The village of Hickman was knocked off
the map yesterday with an auctioneer's hammer.
The village stood in the rain
for $1,039 for what was left of the village. Hickman's dream of a village center. More enterprising neighbors towns had taken themselves the trade and left that once was Hickman.
Hickman's upward curve
began when he moved from Delaware to the village and in the vicinity of the Central Illinois branch from Hickman and his largest grain-shipping
center, that part of the state.
The village of the century the
village set in. Other towns were spring up captured some
of the rural trade.
The village fell off. The village discontinued in 1910. Hard times and travel to more popular centers gave the final blow.
The village, a store, the post office and two small buildings were left for the auctioneer's customers yesterday.
The village of Hickman, of Milwaukee, a connection of the Hickman family marriage, owned what had been the center of the town.
It was she who put it up at sale.

To Break It: We Fix It. Marion
Weaving Co., 132 Oak st.—Adv.

We have to remember, too, that
the village of the century the
village set in. Other towns

of the rural trade.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood
Adventure

BY JUDITH M. LEWIS

I AM always glad when Thursday
comes, because when Thursday is gone there is only one day left to go till it is Saturday, and then a fellow can do anything he likes—if his folks don't know it. It was almost as warm as summertime
when I woke up this morning and let Jubilee down by his rope, and then crawled under my bed on my stomach to get my britches which he had taken under there. Then I went down and went out with the milk pail and found my grandfather out back of the barn digging some worms to go fishing.

I told him that if he would get my mother to let me stay out of school I would go fishing with him.
He straightened up kinda slow and with one hand on his back, and rolled his head around and chewed it a few times, and then he looked at me and asked me how come I was willing to go with him on a school day and didn't like to go with him on Saturday. I told him that I didn't know—I just was.
He said he would talk to my mother. So I was feeling pretty good when I told the bunch in the barn
that maybe I wouldn't go to school today. They were all wishing they were me. Then I went in to feed my father after I had milked and my mother put a note by my plate to take to the teacher. So when we went to the pasture we made the cows go so fast that if they had had wings like an airplane
they could of flew.

When I got to school I went upstairs and the teacher was there,
and I gave her the note and she read it, and she asked me if I had my lessons and I said "Yessum."

She said if it was anyone else she would make them say them, but she had always found me truthful and I might go. It sure pays not to be a liar.

My grandfather had had luck. I broke one of his poles and he said,
I made so much racket I scared the fish away, and the next time he wanted company he would take the fish or an earthquake along. Then he got a bite just as I flung a club in and Jubilee went in after it like a ton of brick, and the fish got away, and if my mother had heard what my grandfather said she would of wished I was in school.

The girls went with us after the cows and we went in a place for some grapes, and the first thing
we knew there was the farmer
with a whip and he made us eat
grapes till the grape going down would meet some of the other grapes trying to come up, and then Banty got sick to his stomach and
the man told us we could go.
Feeble thanked him for the grapes,
and he grinned and asked if she wanted some to take home with her. I didn't eat any supper so my mother made me take some castor oil, and that made me glad I had taken the oil out of the bottle and wrenched it out and put sirup in.

FIND RELICS IN CELLAR

By United Press
NEBRASKA CITY, Neb.—Relics
of the past years, a framed collection of fractional currency, called "shinplasters," was found along with a portrait of George Washing-

here, reveals John D. Stocker, cashier. The Washington portrait carries a date of 1858, show-

FALL RESULTS IN DEATH

By International News Service
GRAND JUNCTION, Colo.—A tumble over his dog while playing caused the death of Harry Cole, 5.
No one suspected the lad had been injured until he complained of numbness in his arm several days
after the fall.

In the old days, the only idea of farm relief was circus day and the Fourth of July.

Mary Roberts Rinehart... Mrs. James J. Davis
Ethel Barrymore
tell you why Palmolive Beads
won unanimous approval of Committee of 17

How miracles of instant-dissolving, speed-rinsing, cool-water cleansing, now bring safety to washing of fine fabrics.

"BECAUSE Palmolive
Beads dissolve instantly and protect silks
against half-dissolved soap
... because they work in water cool enough to be safe
for silks ... because they rinse away completely ...
like a flash, these are the reasons the Committee of 17
approved Palmolive Beads," say Mary Roberts Rinehart, Mrs. James J. Davis and Ethel Barrymore, members of the distinguished Committee of 17 who watched Palmolive Beads, the new soap for silks, tested in comparison with chips and flakes.

What new soap is like

In session at the Ritz Hotel, the committee heard silk manufacturers tell how modern hasty washbowl laund-
ing of silk stockings and lingerie necessitated a soap that dissolves instantly—
cleanses and rinses away 100%—in water 20 degrees cooler than chips and flakes require. How they finally solved this problem
by making a soap of olive and palm oils
... in the form of tiny, hollow, instant-dissolving "beads."

Tests reveal what new soap does

Then the new soap was tested. Mammoth test tubes revealed that the new
"beads" of olive and palm oils dissolve 30
times faster than the thinnest flake or granule!
Used in water barely lukewarm, the new

Mrs. James J. Davis and Mary Roberts Rinehart, two enthusiastic members of the Committee of 17, discussing the effect of soap on silk lingerie, in Mrs. Rinehart's boudoir.

soap cleansed perfectly at low temperatures
never usable before—temperatures advised by textile experts as "safest for silks."

Rinsing tests proved the new soap left others far behind, rinsing out 100% with not a trace of soap residue left to spot and damage delicate fabrics.

So perfectly did the new soap fulfill every requirement laid down by experts ... that it was unanimously approved by the Committee of 17 as "the ideal soap for silks."

Called "Palmolive Beads"

This new soap is called Palmolive Beads. Use it for washing silks and all fine fabrics. Order

Friday and Saturday Only.

Tomorrow, Friday, will be the first of the remaining two days before election when the electors of the city of Marion will be given opportunity to take advantage of the new law providing for permanent registration. The last day will be Saturday.

The various precinct voting places will be open from 1 o'clock in the afternoon till 9 o'clock at night.

Since only about one-fourth of the electors of the city qualified on the first registration day to vote at the coming November election, it is the earnest hope of the election board that there will be a splendid turnout of electors Friday, that the inevitable rush on Saturday may be reduced as greatly as possible.

Permanent registration will mean such a saving of time and effort to those who qualify and, ultimately, work such a saving in the cost of elections, that it is a duty which all electors owe themselves and the community as well to take advantage of it.

It is especially urged that those who can do so will register during the early hours of the afternoon. This will work to equalize the labors of the registrars and facilitate the registration of those whose employment forces them to defer registering until evening or, in some cases, until night.

Remember that there are but two days left—Friday, October 10, and Saturday, October 11—and that the precinct voting places are open only from 1 to 9 p. m. on each of the two remaining registration days.

The Revolution in Brazil.

Although reports have been far from comprehensive, enough is known concerning the Brazilian revolution to impress state department officials in Washington with the seriousness of the situation and lead to the feeling in the capital that it is the most serious in Brazil since that in 1893, when the empire of Dom Pedro, great in fame and great in heart, was overthrown. That this feeling is justified is made evident by cables disclosing that the government has dispatched 100,000 troops to meet the army of 80,000 rebels advancing against the first and second cities of the republic, Rio Janeiro and Sao Paulo, and called 300,000 men more to the colors.

Brazil, a country of vast territory, exceeding that of continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, by 250,000 square miles, and having a population of 42,000,000, is second only in importance among the republics of South America to Argentina. As is the case in most Latin-American republics, but in far greater volume than in the majority, much foreign capital is invested in Brazil. The latest obtainable report shows the total to be approximately $2,500,000,000, of which about one-half is British. American investments there are represented by federal, state and municipal loans amounting to from $400,000,000 to $450,000,000, manufacturing investments of from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, public utility investments ranging from $30,000,000 to $110,000,000 and other investments running from $45,000,000 to $55,000,000. Thus the total of American investments in Brazil is not less than $575,000,000, and may run to $675,000,000. Naturally, there is speculation whether, in the event of the success of the revolution, there would be defaulting on these debts in whole or in part.

Here in the United States the revolution is held to be due to an extended period of depression, due in part to the building up of a large public debt by the Brazilian government, which overreached itself financially in other directions, and in part to the dropping of the bottom out of the coffee market, which is steadily growing worse. There was a hangover of 27,000,000 bags of coffee when this year's crop of 24,000,000 bags was harvested, while Brazilian coffee exports average annually only about 15,000,000 bags.

From the leaders of the revolution, however, comes a different story as to the cause of the revolt, which they say is the abuse of power by the government, which they plan to end by overthrowing the president, Washington Luiz, and the entire federal government and preventing the inauguration of President-elect Julio Prestes. This done, and congress having been dissolved, they propose to establish law and order under a provisional government and call for a new election of president, vice president, senators and representatives, at which the voters will be guaranteed that the officers of their choice will be seated without the funds which, the revolutionary leaders charge, have marked the present federal administration.

In addition to American capital invested in Brazil, there are two other matters which make the situation of especial interest to Americans. One is that our trade with that republic amounts to about $33,000,000 annually, $220,000,000 of which represent our imports and the remaining $115,000,000, our exports. We buy seventy-five per cent of her coffee, while ninety-six per cent of all her exports to the United States come in duty free, a circumstance which beyond all doubt has contributed largely to the friendly feeling which has so long been manifested by Brazil for the United States. This cordial Brazilian feeling for us is the other matter, referred to, which makes any developments there of high interest here in America. No matter what the outcome of the revolution may be, it is to be hoped that it will in no way affect this friendly feeling for us which has so long been the more conspicuous because of the absence of a like feeling in some other republics of South America.

The World Series.

The Philadelphia Athletics, of the American league, retain their title of world's champions, having defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, of the rival organization, in the sixth and deciding game of the series, Wednesday, in the same manner as they won the first—by making every hit count for a run.

In the opening contest, the Athletics scored five runs on five extra-base hits and the seven runs made by them in the final contest were scored on five doubles and two homers. Twelve runs scored in two games on twelve hits, the only hits made by the winners of the two contests, is a new record in world series history.

The Cardinals' battle for championship honors, though unsuccessful, was a splendid one, waged persistently and unceasingly from the start to the close of the series. The pitching of Eatinshaw and Grove, backed by superb fielding and the timely slugging of their teammates and the head work of Connie Mack proved too much for the Nationals, but the latter were great even in defeat.

As a whole, the series offered six exhibitions of high-class, heady ball playing, and was as interesting as any in the history of world baseball championship classics.

The National Air lines have been sued for $50,000 damages by a passenger, who charges that, having purchased a ticket from Louisville, Kentucky, to Chicago, the lines landed him at Springfield, Illinois, causing him to miss an important business engagement. It's our guess that he couldn't have been much more greatly put out had he been interrupted while "in conference."

Reading that the fronts of business places about Boston Common had been boarded up for the American Legion convention, one naturally would have considered the course of the Boston business men a sort of a slap at the legion, but subsequent events have demonstrated that they knew their business. It was Boston's hoodlum element against which there was need for protection.

The mayor of Richmond, Indiana, has emulated the course of Mayor Jones by placing a ban on the practice of hauling a bride and groom about the city to the accompaniment of horn-blowing and other disturbing sounds from noise-producing instruments. Maybe civilization is making its impress upon the country, after all.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC WELL-WISHER.

Editorial Opinion.

"HIGHWAY OF FRIENDSHIP."

No international conference imaginable could make a stronger appeal to the average man or woman than the Sixth International Road Congress now in progress at Washington. More than sixty countries, colonies and dependencies are represented in proceedings designed to bring about better conditions on the highways of the globe, and, in so far as local circumstances permit, to make them so uniform that no motorist, at least, will find himself in a strange land. It is the underlying contention of the Road Congress that nowadays one touch of motor makes the whole world kin. It is natural for the United States, pioneer in modern road construction, to be host to such a convocation in the day which has become the automobile age. Highway engineers from all quarters of the globe hope to possess themselves not only of first-hand knowledge of American road building technique, but of the no less important matter of road financing. The average motorist, here or abroad, who skims scenery "on high" along mile after mile of glittering, smooth concrete, gives little thought to the costliness of the trail that has been blazed for his comfort. As Americans have led the way in devising modern traffic lanes, no have they been in the van of scientific ways and means for making them economically possible.

Every American, city dweller or village resident, is aware of the oppressive omnipresence of the automobile. A community without a traffic problem is today practically unthinkable. Yet it sometimes takes figures to bring vividly home to us the immensity of the role now played by the motor vehicle. Mr. Roy D. Chapin, past president of the National Automobile chamber of commerce and president of the American organizing commission for the Road Congress, has just supplied some arresting statistics:

"Twenty-five years ago," he said, "there were fewer than 25,000 motor vehicles. Today there are over 25,000,000 motor vehicles. Then only 155,000 miles of improved road existed in all the United States. Of that road, but 144 miles had a high-type surface. Today there are more than 600,000 miles of improved highway and another 500,000 of usable dirt road. Where in 1905 we were spending less than $100,000,000 a year in our highway improvement, today we are spending more than $1,500,000,000. Our people want more roads than are being built. Such figures find their parallel more or less all over the face of the earth. To cope with the continuing emergencies they conjure up is the task of these recurring international road congresses. Their purpose is essentially, but not wholly, utilitarian. For, as Mr. Chapin eloquently points out, "our main objective is the creation of highways of friendship within and between all nations." It is an objective, he rightly adds, which aims "at the common good which springs from improved transportation."

SQUATING ON OCEANIC RADIO LINES.

A curious situation comes to light in the statement that the United States is losing out in the scramble for the unexplored regions of the air over the ocean. Foreign nations have been preempting the radio channels by registering their rights to the limited number of remaining frequencies. By international agreement, transoceanic frequencies are allotted on a basis of priority in registration. American companies have been prevented from entering the field because of injunctions issued by the court of appeals at Washington in the continental short-wave litigation. In behalf of certain wireless interests former General Counsel Caldwell of the federal radio commission has asked for an annulment of present restrictions.

Meanwhile overseas the "squatters" are taking possession of the atmosphere. Nearly a century ago the slavery question gave Uncle Sam his problems with squatters in unorganized states of the West. That was a free-soil controversy and solely an internal one. It has had no concern with abroad. Nor are we disturbed now by agrarian questions beyond our shores. But the atmosphere—well that is something else. It may be necessary to deal with these air-sitters much as the average parent dealt with tree-sitting offspring in the past summer: avoid coercion and acquiesce long enough to let the child come to its senses in its own way. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Poking" at the Ear.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

What to do for the minor accidents of life is something everybody should know. The baby gets an object up his nose or ear, one of the family gets something in his eye, or some other painful accident may happen—any one of these experiences calls for judgment and skill at a moment's notice.

It is not uncommon to get a foreign body in the ear. It creates a disagreeable sensation. Probably nothing is more distressing than getting an insect in the ear, and yet how easily that accident can happen. No matter how small the insect is, it can make a lot of trouble. Nature has provided a safeguard in the form of the sticky, odorless earwax. When an insect gains entrance to the ear, the wax and wings just naturally get entangled in this substance. This usually prevents the insect from reaching the eardrum. If an insect ever does crawl far enough to reach the drum membrane the effect is maddening. The loud noises made are overpowering. There is such pain, with headache and vomiting, that convulsions are sometimes caused.

The thing to do at once is to pour sweet oil or olive oil or sewing machine oil into the ear and let it remain for a few minutes. Insects are quickly killed by this means. Then the ear should be gently irrigated with a stream of warm water from a fountain syringe. Never hang the fountain syringe higher than the head. When an object like a bean or pea or any wooden object is found in the nose or ear do not use water in attempts to remove it. This would cause the object to swell.

The thing to do is to take a camel's hair brush of small size, dip it in collodion or glycerine and apply it to the object. Let it dry for a moment and then you can remove the object by pulling on it very gently. Sometimes adhesive plaster will serve just as well when used in a similar manner.

There is no cause for alarm, even if the object remains in place for several hours or a day or two. In the case of a child he should be soothed into thinking no harm will come from it. It may be disagreeable, but it is nothing to be frightened over.

If there is any difficulty in getting an object out a doctor should be called.—Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Dinner Stories.

"Your speeches indicate that your views have changed."

"Not exactly," replied Senator Sorghum. "My constituents' views have changed and I am keeping in touch with the wisdom of the plain people."

Diner—"Waiter, didn't you hear me say 'well done'?"

Waiter, ignoring pink steak—"Yes, sir, thank you very much, sir. It's seldom we get any praise, sir."

"My boy," said the business man to his son, "there are two things that are vitally necessary if you are to succeed in business."

"What are they, dad?"

"Honesty and sagacity."

"What is honesty?"

"Always—no matter what happens, nor how adversely it may affect you—always keep your word once you have given it."

"And sagacity?"

"Never give it."

"Do you mean to say," asked the magistrate, "that such a physical wreck as your husband gave you that black eye?"

The woman smiled proudly.

"E wasn't a physical wreck, your worship," she said, "till e gave me that black eye."

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.

New York, Oct. 9.—Modern vagaries of an unsentimental age have not entirely occluded New York. The golden past peeps faintly through here and there. The old Murray Hill district, more than any other symbolizes how tenuously many cling to subdued and oppressive mid-Victorian propriety.

In this area may be found dignified gentlemen who take infinite pains in tumbling their heads, cultivate a rather melancholy habit of mind and who wear hats straight on their heads instead of at rakish angles. They make sweeping bows to ladies and otherwise epitomize perfect behaviorism.

The old Murray Hill hotel, center of the district, droops in a somnolent gloom. In its enormous lobby are venerable aristocrats who carry gold knobbed canes and meet any unseemly overtures of strangers with quickly lifted eyebrows and hearty garrumphs. A few still indulge a pinch of snuff.

There are Murray Hill men who take an afternoon off now and then to dress in frock coat and high hat and pay brief, respectful calls to the brown stone mansions of old friends. Once a month they gather for town for similar visits with the family lawyer. Many ladies as frail as reed, recall long black half-mits and stately minuettes. On pleasant days they depart in closed carriages, horse drawn, for a circle of Central park. A fleeting glimpse of their faces suggests old ivory and you somehow think of the quick, sad strokes of churchbells.

While the Morgans live on Murray hill, not all are rich as New York judges wealth. But they are the last of the vanishing blue bloods. Uniforms of their coachmen are shabby. Butlers are flabby and gouty from age. Any number of residents still have six-o'clock dinners in the half light of patrician basement dining-rooms.

These are the thinning line of gentle folk to whom tabloids, isms, saxophones, sex novels, pagan plays and other off-shoots of a roistering generation are mysteries. Their amusements are learned lectures at Town Hall and a few auspicious symphony concerts at Carnegie.

I still think, however, nothing looks quite so out of place in the New York hurrah as one of those pointer hunting dogs with beautiful coat and pleading eyes.

On the day the celebrated Henri Matisse visited New York the metropolitan press bulged with engagement tumors of a cabaret singer to a motion picture lady. One notice of the celebrated painter was encompassed under "Hotel Arrivals," dismissed completely with a single line: "Henri Matisse, Nice, France."

A returning American, weary of hearing Berkeley pronounced "Barclay" and Chomolundey "Chumley" had his revenge. A Britisher bade him bon voyage and remarked that some day he hoped to see Niagara falls. "You mean Niffles?" queried the Yank.

"Too, I hear British ship builders are knitting brows to excel with something larger than the German ships 'Europa' and 'Bremen.' They were at work on the thousand-foot Oceanic when the Teutonic liners were launched and immediately abandoned their marine masterpiece. In the meantime French ship builders have up their sleeve the 'Isle de la Cite' in which they hope to cross from Havre to New York in less than four days. Fun on the ocean, gracious me!"

I was getting along fairly well with today's offering when Lisle Bell popped in all merry and bright and observed that what he would enjoy at the moment would be a steaming bowl of old-fashioned navy bean soup flavored with hani-hock. That gives you an idea why we skip out of town now and then to get away from it all.

Also I have got to keep away from Eleventh avenue. It is entirely too rough. Wandering about there yesterday several loafers around a gas house screeched in falsetto, "Yoo ho!" directed, I suppose, at my spats. Feigning nonchalance, I looked for a window in which was a mirror. "Look!" yelled another, "he's taking a pike at his puss." So I scurried away up a side street.

I also stopped in at my old home, the Ritz—you know, see how the other half lives—and it occurs to me the movies could find a handsome leading man in John Lawlor, a starter there.—Copyright, 1930, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

The Origin of Life.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Is the effort to go back to the beginning of things and uncover the mystery origin of life, the modern scientist devoting private attention to intensive analysis of plasma. The search is for some physical basis in all living matter. Living plasma appears under the microscope as acid, granular fluid, presenting a foam-like appearance. The key to the changes in this substance are now being lie in an ultra-microscopic structure, which undergoes various changes corresponding changes in the picture caught under the scope.

Protoplasm, yielding to chemical analysis, proves to be a colloidal complex composed chiefly the elements carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, sulphur, phosphorus, potassium, sodium, chlorine, iron and magnesium, is a very curious and almost inexplicable that all these constituents are likewise inorganic matter. There is no chemical present which is peculiar to living matter.

In consequence, the scientist is studying combinations of elements, rather single elements. Such combinations of mental importance in this study are carbohydrates and fats. The most important of these constituents are the proteins, they are universally present as a part of living matter and form quantitatively the organic constituent.

In spite of the vast amount of study devoted to the proteins, very little is known of them. As Underhill says, from the chemical standpoint protein is a huge molecule, complex in structure in character and therefore prone to change. So large and intricate is the structure of the molecule that chemists have been baffled in their attempts to get adequate conception of its structure. The present stage of our knowledge is in the form of a satisfactory definition of a based either on its chemical or physical properties.

While proteins constitute certain portions of the fundamental constituents of matter, they are not themselves "air" has been said that protein is "the nucleus or pivot around which revolve a multitude of reactions characteristic of life phenomena."

The huge molecule called protein is split up into a large number of simpler units. Yet these simpler molecules are very complex. And it is obvious that may be broken up into hundreds or even thousands of atoms.

It is noteworthy phenomenon in vital matter is what has been called "energy." A sort of trading in energy goes on. Woodruff says in "The Origin of Life" energy traffic consists in appropriating from the environment, storing it in a higher potential and later expending it kinetic form. The protoplasmic system is dowed with a sort of plasticity. Allen de this quality as "peculiar proneness to its composition under the stimulus of changes in the energy-equilibrium between itself and its surroundings."—Copyright, International Feature Service, Inc.

A Washington Day Book.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, Oct. 9.—There has been of comment in Washington and elsewhere on Morris Sheppard's smashing victory in Texas for the right to return to his seat United States senate.

It is heard on all sides: "For a man to receive more than a million votes without making a single speech is an achievement."

That's what Senator Sheppard did author of the eighteenth amendment, a Democratic whip of the senate was de in Washington by the extra session of the state and did not reach Texas until the day before the Democratic primaries.

Yet he ran up a total of 526,923 votes nearest opponent received about one-third this number.

But those close to the little Texan capitalist do not experience much difficulty explaining why he amassed such a vote.

Doubtless there were many issues which tributed to his victory, but there is one which all agree—Morris Sheppard looks his constituents in Washington.

grand jury last month today was a free following his acquittal by a jury in common pleas court yesterday.

Blue's attorney, Frank Wiede-mann argued that the defendant
admitted possession of the grip
which was stolen from the Union station on Aug. 26, but that it was stolen by another man who since has left the city. Blue did not know it was stolen, and readily admitted to police his possession of the bag, Wiedemann argued.

The bag which contained wearing apparel valued at nearly $200,
was the property of Mrs. Thad Hare.

The case against Blue was the last on the present criminal docket. Two others against Chester Whitt and Marion L. Trimmer having been disposed of Monday when Judge George B. Scofield sentenced them to five-year terms in the penitentiary for violation of parole. Whitt was charged with stealing an automobile and Trimmer with burglary. The two were

EXPERT DECISION ON GAS PROPOSAL

Company Officials Say Green

feel, according to plans submitted by the company. Other cities are paying rates higher than the proposed local rate.
One of the chief arguments of the company in favor of a local settlement of the gas rate fight is that a decision of the utilities commission and Ohio courts, on which the city has been waiting several years, will not determine what the local rate shall be. The company argues the proposed $125,000 line needed to give the city service must be taken into consideration, and

How Old Are You?

My Birthday Today—No
Presents Please—I Lost
My Fat With Speed
and Ease

Why will people be fat—is it because they never heard of Kruschen Salts—and the Kruschen way of losing fat—and at the same time gain in activity—energy—ambition—and keenness of mind?

Let me tell you that I did it—I ate three meals a day—but moderate ones—I cut out candy, pastry and ice cream—very little potatoes—plenty of vegetables and fruit.

But most important of all—I took one-half a teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—didn't miss a morning.

Nothing hard about that—is there? and best of all it's inexpensive—for a bottle of Kruschen Salts lasts 4 weeks cost but 85 cents at Bradley's Drug Store, Henney & Cooper's, or any drug store in the world. Not much to pay for freedom from fat slavery and to make yourself feel years younger.

These happy women from various states tell how many pounds they lost with Kruschen.

Montana—10 pounds in 4 weeks—North Carolina—47 pounds in 3 months; Kentucky 24 pounds in 31 days; Wisconsin 11 pounds in 6 weeks; Ohio 10 pounds, no time stated; New York 14 pounds with one bottle.—Adv.

also claims that the rate fixed by the commission is applicable for only two years after the date on which the rate fight was begun. If this is the case, the rate fixed by the commission could only be used by council as a basis for settlement of the local rate, and to determine the amount of refund the city will receive during the two years in which the increased rates were collected under bond.

Councilmen base their hope that the commission will fix a rate lower than the 60 cent rate offered by the company on action of the commission in fixing the valuation of gas company property for rate-making purposes. In fixing an increased schedule of rates five years ago, the gas company claimed a valuation approximating $23,000,000, which was cut to slightly more than $11,000,000 by the commission. Since the rate fight was started, the gas company has been collecting advanced rates here and in several other cities and villages to guarantee a refund in case the commission does not allow the increased rates.

Although gas company officials have declared the commission's final rates in the case can not be put in effect here because of the improvements and extensions needed and the subsequent increase in property valuation, council has maintained that the rates to be fixed by the commission can be used as a basis for a local settlement.

"The present rate, being collected under bond, operates on a 'sliding scale.' The minimum charge for the first 500 cubic feet of gas is 95 cents. The charge for the first 1,000 cubic feet is 48 cents; for the second thousand, 53 cents. The sliding scale goes as high as 63 cents for each 1,000 feet over 15,000.

Vice President in Springfield
for Battle-of Piqua Ceremony.

Following the national trail, he delivered brief addresses at cities along the route and wound up with his speech at the rally here in which he discussed the new tariff act.

Vice President Curtis questioned Democratic statements that the high tariff had injured America's foreign trade, adding that actual statistics disproved such claims. "There are some objectionable features in the tariff act," he said, "but the admittedly good and beneficial provisions far outnumber the others."

After the meeting here, Curtis and Fess went to Yellow Springs, the senator's home, to spend the night.

Senators Fess and McCulloch also addressed the various gatherings, McCulloch reiterating his opposition to repeal of the 18th amendment as advocated by his opponent, Robert J. Buckley of Cleveland, and Fess urging the Republican voters to stand by the party in the November election.

Vice President Curtis criticized Buckley's stand on prohibition by asserting that "the people of Ohio believe in constitutional government."

More red-cells in the blood! Good health and resistance to infection and disease, depend on that! Loss of appetite, underweight, sluggishness, a weakened condition, nervousness, pimples and boils are symptoms, often seen, of a deficiency of red-cells in the blood. If a lowered red-cell count is allowed to continue, ANEMIA often results. S.S.S. should be your safeguard. A hundred years of experience has proved its usefulness in building red-cells in the blood. Take it before meals. Millions of people have found it the easiest and surest way to restore their red-blood-cells. The appetite picks up, the whole body is invigorated. ## 7 Hours in Bed and Not 7 Minutes Sleep

The Toll Acidity Takes

When you go to bed dog-tired and still can't sleep and you rise in the morning more tired than when you went to bed, it's a sign you're "acid." Excess acid, formed in the stomach as a result of our unwholesome eating habits, causes acid indigestion with gas, sourness and burning and sets up poisonous putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal which saps our strength and vitality and so taxes our nerves that we can't sleep at night or work efficiently during the day.

Magnesia Oxide, developed in Germany by a famous 100-year-old pharmaceutical house, corrects acidity in the right way. Upon contact with the acid in the stomach, Magnesia Oxide generates nascent, or active, oxygen. The "live" oxygen stimulates the alkaline gastric mucus, checks putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal and stimulates the activities of the intestinal walls which aids the natural movement of the bowels. All three effects are necessary to the true correction of acidity.

Makes This Acidity Test

To ascertain just how "acid" you are, mix this test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxide from Bradley's Drug Store or any other good drug store. Take two after each meal and see how much better you feel—how much more soundly you sleep and how much more energy you have. If, after taking the contents of one bottle, you don't get more than amazing results, return the bottle to the drug store, with your refund, and the purchase price promptly and in full.—Adv.

DEATH CLAIMS MAN FOUND IN BOX CAR

Negro Found in Unconscious Condition Dies in City Hospital.

Gene Mills, 32, colored, died at City hospital today at 5 a. m. after he had been removed from a box car on a siding near the Pennsylvania freight offices yesterday afternoon.

Internal hemorrhages and exposure to the inclement weather, caused his death, the attending physician said this morning. Mills was unconscious when he was taken to City hospital yesterday.

On his person were discharge papers from the army. He is believed to have been from Youngstown. Letters and other personal property corroborate the name he gave a companion with whom he was riding.

According to the friend, he and Mills met several years ago while hopping freight trains, and had renewed acquaintances in Akron and boarded a freight train coming south. Mills became ill and they stopped of here for aid. He was in serious condition when he arrived at the hospital, but it was not thought that he would die.

No trace of relatives can be made, and funeral arrangements are pending. The body is at the W. C. Boyd funeral home on South Main street.

Any dominion that chooses may abolish the right of its citizens to appeal to Britain's privy council against their own Supreme Court.

The Irish decided that their own courts are good enough, while this country decides that it needs decisions from foreign judges, and joins the world court, sitting 3,000 miles away across the ocean.

What has happened to our national backbone?

ONE SCIENTIST disliking the idea of making money, said when announcing an important discovery: "Thank heaven, it cannot have any practical use." Probably he was mistaken.

Paresis, a disease of the mind, that had always ended fatally, is now treated successfully by radio. The disease has recently been fought by creating intense fever in the patient; malaria-bearing mosquitoes were made to plant malarial germs in the patient's blood—he got malaria, but paresis improved.

Now, in place of the malarial mosquito, and unpleasant disease germs, the clean radio is used to cause intensely high fever. New York Academy of Medicine doctors discuss the new "remedy" with hope and excitement.

The "curing machine" is a small radio station. Its energy is localized between two planets. The patient sits between them, and the radio impulses pass through him, creating a high fever.

EARLY LAW BOARD REPORT PROMISED

There'll Be "No Pussyfooting" on Enforcement Question, Wickersham Says.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Promise of an early report on prohibition in which there will be "no pussyfooting" emanated from President Hoover's law enforcement commission today after long hours of argument at its opening session yesterday.

It has become definitely known that the controversial subject of prohibition is now dominating the discussions of the commission and it also is known that virtually all of the day and night sessions of yesterday were spent in arguing the demands of an insurgent element on the commission for an immediate report on this question.

Chairman George W. Wickersham announced after the long opening session that the commission hoped to report to congress by the opening of the December session. He added he believed "if the commission reaches the conclusion that prohibition is not enforceable, I think we should say so."

When you make a visit, and find there is trouble in the house which you can't help, your host may be glad to have you take yourself off.

THE ROSE IN THE DARK

BY ROY VICKERS

A girl's dream of happiness shattered almost before it began, but from a tragic tangle emerged a finer love, destined to defy adversity. This story of three persons caught in a mesh of conflicting emotions grows more absorbing as it progresses from day to day.

COPYRIGHT, 1934, BY ROY VICKERS

CHAPTER 1 The Girl on the Cliff

The cliff-head looked out to the west, straight into the last molten gold of the day. The sands at the cliff's foot glittered and dazzled for a moment. Then slowly they lost their glory and darkened to the gray of the sea.

In the shelter, built into the face of the cliff, it had been some time but the man and the girl seated there had not noticed it.

"Sweet," said the man, "you have seen a sunset until you have seen the end of an afternoon. It all goes with a rush—reds and greens and purples rushing up from the sea, the sun rushing down, the beauty and all the beauty clashing together and making one."

"It's no good trying to describe it. You must see it." He looked so sharply that the girl was nearly a groan.

"What is the matter?" asked the girl quickly.

"I was remembering that perhaps I shall never see any kind of sunset again."

"I was such pain in her estimation that he became apologetic."

"I'm sorry. I can't imagine how you made me say such a thing. Must need more exercise of something. I don't usually indulge in cheap melodrama."

"What is the matter with your eyes?"

He answered the question as simply as she had asked it.

"Nobody quite knows. I got a germ—a poisonous germ—in them while I was out in the wilds. Two or three doctors—fine fellows—are on the germ's track, and although they haven't really found out much about him they believe they know what will kill him."

"And that is—?"

"Another germ. Only, you see they aren't sure. It's a big risk in a way, they hate to take that risk. Personally, I feel I'd rather risk blindness than let him believe they know what will kill him."

"You can't see—clearly?"

"I can't see you clearly—no."

The girl blushed beautifully. He had told her what she had said. She felt a keen disappointment that he could not see her clearly, and then an immense flood of pity for him.

"I can see fairly well in a shaded room," he was explaining in a matter-of-fact way. "Sometimes if one shaft of light falls on a face, I can see it as well as ever. But out here in the air I have to wear these dark glasses and that obscures everything; even—the sunset."

She believed he had been going to say "even you," and she clasped her hands tightly in her lap.

She was amazed at herself. What was she doing? What was she thinking? This was only a chance encounter with a man whose name she didn't even know. She had been waiting for another man of an utterly different type—the man she loved. She repeated it firmly to herself—the man she loved and was going to marry.

Well, she had been waiting for him rather impatiently because he was so inexcusably late. Then this stranger had come so uncannily into the shelter. And he had asked her if he might smoke—or perhaps she had spoken to him first. She couldn't remember quite how the conversation had started because so much, so wonderfully much, had been said.

"I can see that you are slender and fairly tall and that you move rather slowly," he told her. "And that is about all. Perhaps it is because I can see so little of you that I feel I should know your voice again the moment I heard it. You get to know voices. I shall never forget yours."

She felt as breathless as if she had come running up the face of the cliff.

"Then at our next meeting," she said bravely, "I must be the first to speak."

He had hoisted himself to his feet and stood now as though he looked out over the sea. And she, her head flung back, studied him intently.

What a big man! And yet he was not outlandishly tall and not burly, either. He managed his height and his weight perfectly—even the trouble with his sight did not make him clumsy.

She liked, too, his bronzed skin and his untidy brown hair. She was quite sure his eyes were gray. And there was something in his way of suddenly smiling and turning his head that stirred her profoundly. Had she not been already in love and pledged to marry, she could have dreamed that she loved this man.

"Please tell me your name," she ventured.

He answered her almost absently.

"Grannock. Saxely Grannock."

She turned the name over in her mind. She had come to this little village on Long Island because her lover lived here. She had stayed here for nearly three weeks and had grown to know most of the residents by sight, but Saxely Grannock she had never seen until this evening.

She gazed at him, a dozen questions on her lips. Where did he come from? Who was he, when he wasn't carrying strange dreams into stranger lands?

Apparently one could tell him all manner of intimate things, things never revealed to the man one loved, and receive in exchange hour upon hour of confidence—and yet one couldn't possibly ask him about his lodgings!

"I ought to have introduced myself long ago," she said hurriedly. My name—"

"No!" He swung round toward her, checking her in mid-word. "No, don't tell me who you are. You see, if the eye treatment fails and I lose my sight, it's—It's better for me not to be able to remember you at all, except as a voice. A very wonderful voice."

"And if you're cured?" she whispered.

"Then I'll find you. I'll—I'll advertise for you. We'll have a secret code. I'll advertise—'To the Ivory Rose. Come home.' Look!"

He had thrust a finger into his breast pocket and now held out to her a small, gleaming object which in the growing dark appeared to be a rose carved from ivory. "Take it. I want you to have it. I've carried it for years because I'm so damned superstitious."

"Then surely I mustn't take away your luck?"

"Luck!" He laughed shortly. "I've lost my time. I've lost my money. I'm losing my sight—no, the ivory rose isn't supposed to bring luck or ill-luck either, until—"

"Until?"

"Until it's given by a man to a woman. To the woman. Then it brings them both—happiness."

She watched him as he moved away along the cliff-path. The twilight seemed to reach forward and take him to itself; she, too, had a superstitious streak and the waiting darkness seemed to her a bad omen.

She shivered.

Then a stone slipped away under his foot and she stifled a cry; but he passed steadily on. An instant later he had rounded a bend and she could see nothing but the heavy shadows of the cliff.

Why had this strange man, already half-blind, stirred her so deeply? She had felt drawn inexorably to him in spite of herself, in spite of what she had thought was undying love for the man for whom she was waiting. She felt almost afraid, as she looked out over the dark sea. What did it all mean?

"You clever kid! Oh, you clever, clever kid!"

She started violently and turned. The man for whom she had waited in vain was bending over her, his hands were on her shoulders, his young radiant face was close to hers.

"Come along now, I'm going to walk you briskly up the bank and down again. Can't have you catching a chill even in the good cause of meeting me."

He had pulled her to her feet. He was shorter by some inches than the man who had walked unfalteringly into the dusk, and she realized it as she stood now looking levelly into his eyes. Remembered, also, that as a child she had said she would never marry a short man.

"Hallie!" He shook her, not too gently. "Wake up! You're staring at me without seeing me. Poor kid, you've been bored into a sort of coma! What about running to town and seeing a show?"

"I shall never forget your voice," said Grannock.

CHAPTER 2 Surprising News

IT WAS Lester's extraordinary physical beauty that attracted her. Deep-eyed, golden-skinned, sweet-tipped—he was a young god roaming the cliffs where his nymph had hidden. Half absently, she put up a hand and passed it over his thick, red-brown hair.

"A awful waste to give such a heap of good looks to a man, wasn't it?" He laughed.

She drew away from him. At first she had been amused at such frank acceptance of a handsome face but lately the joke had begun to pall.

"She's jealous!" he exclaimed. "Oh, then he laughed again. 'Hailie, what's it matter if a lot of dumb flappers make fools of themselves over me? You know it's only you I'm keen about. Hailie, your eyes are dark as night, and yet they're not really black. And one of your eyebrows is arched a little higher than the other—I like to try to make them match.'"

But she evaded his touch. His spell was upon her, but it was not so strong tonight. "You've never told me anything about my voice," she said.

"Why, it's a wonderful voice. It's—"

She interrupted him as though she regretted her question.

"You were so late," she accused. "I waited and waited for you, Lester."

"I was only 10 minutes behind time, sweetie. And when I saw that you had seized the heaven-sent opportunity of tackling old Socks, I just lay low."

"Socks?" she repeated.

"You let him jaw to you for nearly three hours. I counted 'em. Did you get a flock of jungle talk? Can't imagine a worse life than fooling around among wild men and apes and crocodiles, but Socks doesn't seem cured of it yet."

She stood still and stared.

"The man I was talking to," she said, "was called Saxely Grannock."

"I know, Socks. My brother. My half-brother," he said.

"We had different fathers. But as mine died before I was born, mother brought us both up. She left me in Socks' charge—look here, I've told you all this before, surely!"

"Yes, you have. But I didn't realize that your half-brother's name wouldn't be Broom and you never called him anything but Socks. And you told me he wouldn't come home before next Saturday."

"He turned up last night unexpectedly. Something to do with his eyes."

"You didn't tell me he was in danger of going blind?"

Her voice was shaking. "Do you mean to tell me—"

"Cried Lester—"do you mean to tell me that you didn't know that for the last three hours you've been enduring the well-known Socks?"

"No, I didn't know. . . . So that's why you thought I'd been clever."

Broom was laughing immoderately.

"Oh, Lord, it's great! Now, if only we can make Socks believe you didn't waylay him on purpose! He's a suspicious bird—old Socks. . . . Hailie, you may not have been such a clever kid as I thought but I bet you've been twice as effective. Three hours of Socks! The trick is ours, all right."

She turned upon him with a fierceness as startling to her as to him.

"Yes, it was a trick as we planned it, even when we thought he'd be able to take a good look at me. I'm ashamed of myself. And now that he's nearly blind—" er left things. She had such profound faith in Socks' judgment about everything that she left all her money in trust for me. I get it when and if I marry a girl he approves of. Until then—well, I get an allowance."

"You always seem to have plenty of money. And, after all, Lester, you don't have to work for it."

"The Brooms have always been gentlemen," he explained magnificently. "And that—if you don't mind my saying so, Hailie—that's just the difficulty. Supposing we had gone to Socks and asked his blessing right off the bat? He'd have wanted to know all about you, naturally, and you'd have told him—"

"That I'm earning my living as a nurse. That my name is Hailie—Ellesmore—the name of my dear aunt who was mother and father to me and who told me that my father had abandoned me. The color was high in her cheeks. 'She offered, before she died, to tell me all about him. I refused even to hear his name. He'd abandoned me. I was glad to abandon him.'"

"Yes, I know—it's damn pathetic and Ellesmore's a nice name, but socially speaking, it's sort of bad. You see—"

"Then suppose we solve the problem by simply breaking off our engagement?"

She had not meant to say it. She caught her breath. The next instant Broom had pulled her back into his arms and was savagely kissing her upturned face.

"No, we won't break off our engagement, Hailie. I think not, Hailie. I want you. And you love me, too, though you ride your little high horse now and then. Yes, you love me all right—"

"Lester, let me go! You're hurting me!"

"Maybe I am a little. But you like it when I hurt you—you said once that you liked it. Hailie—Hailie—"

She ceased to struggle. His spell was upon her, it clutched her fast. His kisses were on her eyes and her lips, his god-like, radiant fairness was alight with the flame that she of all women could kindle in him.

But underneath her languorous content there hid the knowledge that it was not his embrace that was hurting her tonight. It was the edge of something delicate, yet sharp, that she had slipped into her dress for safe keeping. The ivory rose, warm between her breasts, had drawn her blood.

CHAPTER 3 Facing the Unknown

NOW there is nothing for you to worry about," said the doctor in that loud and cheerful voice which doctors employ when they are themselves exceedingly worried.

"Nothing whatever. Dr. Russell's instructions are simple and there are three of us to see them carried out. . . . Nurse, just go and get a breath of fresh air for a minute while the light lasts."

Saxely Grannock's grey eyes twinkled through their weariness.

"And to think I've spent half a day trying to get rid of her for half an hour without hurting her feelings," he murmured. "Go and get a breath of fresh air—I must remember that formula. Or wouldn't it work if the patient said it?"

"It would not," grinned the doctor. "Nurse Casey had her orders not to leave you and she's a reliable little woman. You mustn't be alone, well, until things are all over."

"A trick? My dear girl, it was plain common sense. . . . I've told you, Hailie, how much

"Yes. The last eye injection can't possibly take effect for eight hours. So I want you to get some sleep while you can. When you wake you'll find the New York nurse—what's her name?—Nurse Ellesmore—in charge. She knows what symptoms to look for and at the right time she'll call me."

"Fine! I hope they'll make you comfortable upstairs. Put off the sleeping draught for 10 minutes, won't you—and have a cigarette? There are one or two things I want to take a look at while I can. That, for instance."

He nodded in the direction of an oil painting of the late mistress of the house hung upon the nearby wall and in silence the doctor switched on a lamp and raised it so that its light slanted upwards.

"Thanks," said Grannock. "Extraordinary how Lester remembers her, isn't it?"

"Lester," said the doctor, "has had to go in town on what he assumed was urgent business. He may or may not be back tonight."

"Ah! Well, he's better out of the way, no doubt. Grannock's voice was expressionless.

"There's something I want you to do for me, doc."

"Sure, anything in the world."

"If I go blind—and only if I go blind—I want you to find a—a friend of mine. A lady. A lady I met a few days ago on the cliff-path."

"Certainly I'll go. What's her name?"

"I don't know. I wouldn't let her give it to me."

"Well—well, her address then?"

"From something she said, she is a visitor staying in rooms—that overlook the sound."

"I'll do my best, old man. You can give me a description of her?"

"She has a wonderful voice," said Grannock very quietly. "Husky and low and—dark. I have an idea she is dark but, of course, I couldn't see. She's slender and fairly tall and young. She told me she was 23."

"Lytton, you'll find her, won't you—and give her a message from me?"

"I'll move heaven and earth. . . . You don't think she'll have left?"

"She said she was staying till the end of the month; then her holiday ends. Apparently, she earns her living but she didn't say how. We met sort of casually in the cliff shelter and we talked. Or, at any rate, I talked. He forced a smile. "I discovered afterwards that we were in the shelter for over three hours. It didn't seem 20 minutes. I told her about this eye-business. It seemed quite natural to tell her—everything. When we parted we arranged that if I am cured I am to communicate with her. If not—silence."

"And what," asked Lytton gently, "is the message that I am to deliver?"

"That I recognize that the arrangement was a ragged one. Easy enough for me, if I lose my sight to lie low and say nothing for the rest of my life but too indefinite for her. If I do go blind, I just want you to tell her so. Only if—if she seems to think that blindness is no obstacle to our further friendship, you'll persuade her otherwise."

"I'll do my best, Grannock."

After the doctor left, Grannock lay with his eyes on the long panel of light that he knew to be the study window.

He thought of the girl on the cliff and tried to remember the sound of her voice. . . . He failed.

He thought of the doctor's words. . . . He failed.

girl whom his fancy was painting. By some chance effect of light and shade he saw her quite distinctly. . . . At his exclamation little Nurse Casey came trotting from the far end of the room.

"There's a woman—a lady outside," he said with difficulty. "Probably on her way to the front door. I particularly want to see her before I—I go to—"

"Now you go off to sleep. Mr. Grannock. There was no one there, honestly, or I should have seen them. The only person who passed was the new nurse. Dr. Lytton took her down to the road with him and she's just back. She's coming on duty at midnight. Her name? Oh, it's Ellesmore. Nurse Ellesmore, come over especially from New York. She's awfully nice."

She spoke sincerely, for she was a sincere and generous little soul. She pulled another blanket over the sleeping man and sat down again by the window.

CHAPTER 4 The Darkness Closes In

AS the old clock in the hall struck midnight the study door opened. Nurse Casey rose and went softly forward to meet Nurse Ellesmore. Together they stood by the heavily sleeping man.

"He hasn't stirred since 10," said Nurse Casey, in a whisper. "And there's no swelling round the eyes yet."

"You know how to tend for Dr. Lytton when the toxin begins to work, don't you? And the doctor is being called at 4, anyway, because he doesn't really expect any results before then. I do hope the experiment succeeds, don't you?"

"Yes," assented Hailie.

"I do find it so difficult not to get—well—personal about my patients," Casey confessed. "If Mr. Grannock goes blind I shall cry myself sick. It's awfully nice. Much nicer than his half-brother, for all his beautiful eyes and his laughing ways. A slow flush covered Hailie's face."

"The reason I mention Mr. Broom," went on Nurse Casey, "is that he isn't home yet and when he does come, he may be noisy."

"Noisy?"

"Well, he very often is slightly intoxicated when he comes home late and then he's noisy."

"Mr. Grannock shan't be disturbed."

Hailie looked at the sleeping man and marvelled at the strangeness of life. When she had received instructions not to return to New York at the end of her holiday but to report to Dr. Lytton, she had been glad to think that work would keep her in Southcliff and possibly near to the house in which Saxely Grannock was meeting fate. When she had learned that she was actually to be by his side during the encounter she had left savagely triumphant.

She believed that she had decided not to marry Lester Broom.

An hour passed and another. Grannock still slept. And then, as the clock struck 2, Lester returned.

Hailie heard an oath, a crash and a laugh in the hall. Her face contracted with disgust. She stiffened and rose. He was not going up to his room. He was coming to the study. She opened the door and slipped out.

"You cannot come in here," she said coldly. "Mr. Grannock is asleep."

"That's exactly why I can come in, Hailie darling."

"You—you knew I was here?"

"Sweetheart, I engineered it. Went up and told your mother that you were a friend of the family and the only nurse in the world who wouldn't drive old Socks off his nut and so on and so on."

"You'd no business to interfere. I resent it strongly. I—"

"You can't be angry with me for long," he told her, with his devil-may-care, whispering laugh. "No one ever is."

He made a none too steady movement towards her. His tie was crooked, the sleeve of his dinner-jacket stained with wine.

"Go to your room," she said firmly. "You'll wake Mr. Grannock. And, Lester—you'll find me into awful trouble, if I go found here talking to you. Go! Do, please, go!"

"Come and my good-night to me, then, properly, and I'll be good."

"For an instant he looked so steady, so other and normal that her guard relaxed."

She took a step towards him and at once his arms were round her. With a strength she had never suspected in him, he found her groping his way across the hall. The nurse and I got him back to the study. Nurse Ellesmore appeared out of the drawing-room a quarter of an hour later. Broom was asleep on the floor."

"Has he anything to say?"

"He woke up about midday. I saw him for a few minutes in his room—couldn't make much impression on him. He mentioned that he wasn't going to have the girl, but he intended to marry her."

"Just go and bring the girl here, will you? Don't need a servant."

"If you're any kind of defense, Russell said to Hailie when she appeared, 'I want to hear it. We're anxious to be fair with you. You won't say your patient and you

"You can scream," he said, "but no one will hear you."

"Unlock the door! Give me that key! Give it to me or I'll get out through the window." She was fighting him wildly, sick with shame.

She darted to the window, opened it and recoiled. The house was built against a hillside and although the study window opened on a stone terrace under the drawing-room window, the ground dropped some 30 feet.

"Break your pretty neck if you jump out there," said Lester's thickening voice behind her.

She turned desperately and at the same moment his hand went to his pocket and he threw the key out into the garden below.

"That settles it," he exclaimed. "Now we'll have a drink in peace."

He sat heavily down and almost at once lost consciousness. "And I believed I loved him!" she sobbed.

Like a moth, she ran from window to door and door to window. Like a moth, she searched the room for something—anything—with which to pick the lock. She hammered on the door and called. At last, she pulled down a picture and made a loop of the wire.

She was still working at the lock when the clock struck 4 and she heard distant movement in the house. Again she knocked and called. She was dishevelled, sobbing to herself, shaking with rage and fear. No one answered her and she worked at the lock again.

It yielded unexpectedly. She tore the door open, sped across the hall and came face to face with Doctor Lytton and Nurse Casey. At sight of them she cried aloud.

"Mr. Grannock! Oh, how—what has happened to Mr. Grannock?"

The doctor looked at her as she herself might look upon a loathsome reptile.

"You'd better get to your room. I'll deal with you later. . . . Nurse Casey, get a call through to Dr. Russell. We shall have to tell him that the night-nurse deserted her post and Mr. Grannock's sight is practically gone."

CHAPTER 5
Depth of Despair

"I BLAME myself," said Dr. Lytton. "I was so sure that there could be no change in Grannock's condition before 4 o'clock."

"I can't consider that any blame attaches to you whatever," returned Dr. Russell, the eye specialist.

"If I'd been called, I'd have tackled it according to your instructions," said Dr. Lytton. "But I wasn't called. Grannock says that by the time his sedative wore off, the inflammation was acute. He realized he was alone and started out to get upstairs and find me. By that time it was nearly 4 and I was coming down, anyway. I found him groping his way across the hall. The nurse and I got him back to the study. Nurse Ellesmore appeared out of the drawing-room a quarter of an hour later. Broom was asleep on the floor."

"Has he anything to say?"

"He woke up about midday. I saw him for a few minutes in his room—couldn't make much impression on him. He mentioned that he wasn't going to have the girl, but he intended to marry her."

"Just go and bring the girl here, will you? Don't need a servant."

"If you're any kind of defense, Russell said to Hailie when she appeared, 'I want to hear it. We're anxious to be fair with you. You won't say your patient and you heard Mr. Lester Broom come home."

"I know quite well, Dr. Russell, that I disobeyed orders with fatal results to Mr. Grannock and that therefore I shall be dismissed from my profession."

"Oh, you know that, do you?"

"It's obvious. And therefore I appreciate your attitude but—I should prefer to leave the house without this cross-examination."

"You needn't waste that kind of thing on me," Russell told her calmly

Hemorrhoid Sufferers
Stop Pile Misery Without Cutting

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonard, succeeds, because it removes this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts.

HEM-ROID tablets as sold by druggists everywhere, have such a wonderful record for quick and lasting relief, that Hennessey & Cooper always sell them with guarantee of money back if they do not end all pile suffering.—Adv.

CLASSES AT ATHLETICS 'A GREAT TEAM'

MANAGER OF CHAMPS CONSIDERS REPEAT WIN AS REAL TEST

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK

NOW that the Philadelphia Athletics have demonstrated what can be done to win two world championships in consecutive years, the baseball classic can take the undivided attention of the sports followers. From now until Thanksgiving the grid game will be the center of attraction.

Whether worked out the schedule of the larger schools and universities this season must have been going to be over. With baseball going on there has not been a single game of major proportions, save the Notre Dame-Southern Michigan struggle last Saturday.

With the closing of baseball this weekend brings on a large number of games that may do quite a bit to decide what schools will go through the present grid season with unmarred records.

In the Big Ten conference undoubtedly the eyes of sports world will be focused on the outcome of the Northwestern-Ohio State battle. With each school possessing at least one player of possible All-American standing for 1930 and a strong supporting cast, the game may do a lot about who will win the Big Ten title for the year.

Northern looks like the favorite right now. Other games in the Big Ten will bring together Purdue and Michigan. Purdue won last year 30 to 16 and figures to win again this year although not a large score. Wisconsin plays Chicago and probably will give them another beating nearly as bad as the 20 to 6 defeat administered last season. Two other Big Ten teams, Indiana and Minnesota play Oklahoma A. & M. and Stanford respectively and both should lose by a good margin. In the other important mid-western battles, Notre Dame will probably beat the Midshipmen but the Navy will give the Ramblers a good game.

If plans of the Steam Shovel Athletic Association do not go amiss before the winter sports season get into full swing Marion followers are likely to see a first class revival of amateur "beak busting" activities. As part of an extensive indoor sports program the winter the west side group has formulated tentative plans for boxing bouts at intervals during the winter.

The bouts will not be run as a money making proposition although a small admission will be charged to meet the usual expenses. If the bouts are run on the same plane as the other amateur sports which the Shovel is conducting they will deserve the support of the Marion sports public. While one may not see any Mickey Walkers or Jack Dempseys in the proposed bouts it is more than likely that the matches will be fights. And that is more than can be said for a large majority of the pro fights which are now being staged. If about 40 rounds of Marion kids punches and school-boy socks can't provide a fair evening of entertainment the local amateur fighters had better remain amateurs. They'll be safer.

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 9.—Navy was scheduled to leave this evening for South Bend to play Notre Dame on Saturday with the quarterback job still undecided.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Two Big Ten football coaches of distinction, Noble Kizer of Purdue and Fritz Crisler of Minnesota, face crucial tests Saturday when they send their eleven into action against rugged foes.

Kizer, successor to Jimmy Phelan, who directed the Boilermakers to their first Big Ten championship last year, faces a brilliant and dangerous Michigan team while Crisler and his team attempt to turn back the invasion of Stanford.

An coaches with a future go, each finds himself in a rather tight position, especially Crisler whose team was trounced by Vanderbilt last week.

Kizer's team looked good during its triumph over the strong Baylor eleven last week but Michigan is a different type of foe.

Defense against the Michigan lateral and triple pass plays worried Coach Kizer as he gave his team a final drill for the game last night. Armed with the Wolverine plays, the freshmen made substantial gains and added to his fretting.

Stanford favored. A victory over Stanford was hardly hoped for at Minnesota, yet a complete rout wasn't expected either.

Vanderbilt, has been polished up and some new running plays unearthed for the Pacific coast invader.

Ohio State and Northwestern, rivals in one of the outstanding games of the conference program Saturday, have almost completed their drills for the clash. Northwestern's great triple threat ace, Hank Bruder, expected to get into the game despite an attack of grippe while most of the Buckeye regulars were in good condition.

Chicago's aerial game worries Wisconsin's Baileys, who hope to start the Big Ten race with a victory Saturday.

Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, confronted by non-conference foes Saturday, used much of their drill time for experimental purposes.

HAVERHILL, N. H.—Dartmouth suffered a setback today with announcement that Crehan and Clark are both out with injuries and will not play against Boston University.

CAMBRIDGE—George Talbot, who recently returned to guard after being out with injuries, was again on the injured list today and probably won't play with Harvard until the Dartmouth game. Bob Faxon, just back in uniform, also was injured and will not be able to play this week.

Mack Refused To Class Philadelphia as "Great" for League Victory.

BY BRIAN BELL

Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—The Athletics of Philadelphia, world's champions for the second time in two years, had a right to today to consider themselves "a great team."

The accolade was bestowed by no less a judge of baseball teams than Connie Mack himself. The 67-year-old manager of the Athletics refused to stamp his team as "great" after it had won the American league championship. First, he said, the A's must repeat as world's champions.

The American leaguers won the series in impressive fashion by capturing the sixth game, 7 to 1, from the courageous but impotent St. Louis Cardinals.

After the effective pitching of big George Earnshaw, the Cards were almost helpless, failing to get a man to third base until two batters had been retired in the final inning. When the visitors counted their lone run they broke a streak of scoreless pitching against them by Earnshaw which had extended over a stretch of 22 innings.

Not So Bad

The big moose of the A's blanked the opposition in the last seven innings of the second game of the series, permitting six hits and winning 6 to 1. In the fifth game at St. Louis he went the first seven innings without being nicked for a run when he left the game for a pinch hitter. In this game he had allowed only two hits. In the final game he turned the opposition back without a run and with only three hits until the ninth when a single and double with a pass in between was good for a run.

The triumph of the Athletics marked the fourth straight year in which the American league champions had won the highest prize baseball has to offer and 16 out of 19 games won.

The game which rang down the curtain on the major league baseball for the year was typical of the pitch set by the moundmen for the series. In only one game was the losing team able to score more than one run and in the opening battle only a scant two runs fell to the lot of the vanquished.

Before the series started close observers of the pitching strength of the Athletics suggested that the venerable Connie Mack would have to depend on his two stars, the left-handed Robert Moses Grove and the right-handed George Livingston Earnshaw, to bring home the bacon.

Divide Victories

The four Philadelphia victories were equally divided between the pair of aces, each officially credited with winning two. Grove was charged with a defeat while Earnshaw's record escaped unmarred. Walberg was charged with the other loss suffered by the Athletics.

Grove or Earnshaw, or both, pitched in five of the six games played, each pitching two full games and dividing the other between them. Earnshaw narrowly missed winning three games.

Earnshaw went the route in the final battle but Grove was ready to step in if his colleague had shown any indication of tiring. As the last play of the game was made, Grove was pumping fast balls into the big glove of Earl Mack in the bullpen. The younger Mack prepared to send the ball southpaw to the mound if his father was needed.

Signal from the bench, it seemed for a moment at the close that the left-hander might be called on but Earnshaw weathered the slight flurry although probably he was tired. An unassisted double by Jimmy Fox on a liner from Frisch's bat kept Earnshaw in and Grove out.

Had this ball gone safe, in all probability big George would have been relieved before the final out was registered.

EARNSHAW TO GET TITLE OF HERO OF BASEBALL CLASSIC

Hurls Two Victories, Narrowly Misses Third; Simmons Leads at Bat.

BY ALAN GOULD

Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—There was only one nomination today for the player most entitled to enter the rank of world's series heroes.

He is George Livingston Earnshaw, New Yorker by birth, Philadelphia by adoption and achievement, alumnus of Swarthmore college and right-handed "iron man" pitcher ace, of the world's champion Athletics.

Earnshaw is 30-years old now, long past the day when he used to hear the old college cheers, but he still parts his hair in the middle and looks the part of an undergraduate. He was a great football player as well as a star pitcher in college. He is the greatest right-handed "iron man" in baseball now and entitled to rank with such famous old-time stars as Joe McGinnity, Jack Combs and Big Ed Walsh.

After sharing the pitching "big act" with his team-mate and co-star, Robert Moses Grove, most of the way, Earnshaw found up in a blaze of pitching glory by hurling 16 of the last 18 innings for the A's. Earnshaw broke up what was expected to be a repetition of the fifth game "act" with Grove by sticking to the last man was out, even though it was a struggle, while Grove continued to make gestures in the bullpen.

Simmons Leads at Bat

At Simmons was the most consistent of the Athletics at bat, hitting safely in five of the six games as he lived up to the best traditions of the league's batting king, leading the regulars of both teams with the stick. Simmons had the long range support, however, at various times from Cochrane, Fox, as well as Dykes and Miller, who staged hitting come-backs in the final game.

Fox struck the most potent and important single blow, when he fired his home run into the St. Louis stands in the ninth inning to decide the critical fifth game.

For the Cardinals, 22-year-old Charley Gilbert, appearing in his first world's series, was a sensation at bat as well as in the field. Reaching spectacular heights in the two victories scored by the Red Birds to even the series at St. Louis, he led the Cardinal regulars at bat and handled 28 chances without a slip-up in six games, making a number of sensational plays on ground balls.

Bottomley Is Flop

Sunny Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first sacker, was the biggest disappointment for the Cardinals at bat, striking out nine times as he fell only one short of the record of ten made by George Kelly of the Giants in 1921. Bottomley probably has played his last game in a St. Louis uniform. The general expectation being that he will be traded before another season rolls around.

Three great fielding plays stood out. Perhaps the most spectacular was Bottomley's one-handed catch of Fox's foul, as he leaned far into the temporary field boxes for the ball in the third game.

Max Bishop's fine running catch of Douthett's short fly in the fourth game, taking the ball over his shoulder on the dead run, and Frank Frisch's amazing stop and throw out of Mickey Cochrane in the final game were the other sparkling defensive contributions.

Cochrane Scores Run That Wins Title

A hard hit double by Bing Miller scores Mickey Cochrane of the Athletics in the first inning of the final world's series game played at Philadelphia. Cochrane is shown above crossing the plate.

The Athletics won the game, 7 to 1, the series and the world's baseball championship for 1930. It is the second consecutive title for the Mackian forces and the fifth for the Athletics since the diamond classic was inaugurated.

Wingert, regular sophomore guard, is nursing a bruised knee which he sustained in practice Tuesday, but he will be able to play against the Purple.

Cards, A's Set Three New Marks Each in Series

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Although the 1930 world's series never will be famous for its record-breaking, a half-dozen new marks for world's championship play were inscribed on the books by the Athletics and Cardinals. The records are evenly divided.

Frank Frisch, veteran Cardinal second baseman, led on the positive side as he collected five hits in six games to set a new total series record of 45 safe blows. He tied the old record of 42, made by Eddie Collins in six world's series for the Athletics and White Sox, in the first game, then cracked out three more blows. Frisch also has participated in six series. The former Fordham flash fell below the 300 mark for the series, however, and dropped his all-time average for championship play to .324 from .348.

Right behind Frisch his team-mate, Chick Hafey, set a new mark by smashing out five two-base hits, one higher than the total which formerly gave a large group of players a tie for the record. The Athletics set a mark of a new kind when they went through two games without getting a one-base hit, all their blows going for extra bases.

The A's also put their great leader, Connie Mack, still further ahead of all major league managers in getting results with his clubs. Under his guidance, Philadelphia has won five world's championships, and has lost in the world's series only twice. John McGraw has led the New York Giants to three world's titles in nine attempts while the New York Yankees under Miller Huggins also won three times.

On the low side of the record breaking, the performances the clubs on asphalt stood out. In the second game of the series, the Cardinals had only four assists, one under the former low mark made by the Yankees while the Athletics had five, setting a new low record for both teams. Three days later, in the fourth game, the Athletics recorded only three assists, again breaking the record. They also equaled the low mark in base-stealing as a theft by Frank Frisch was the only one for the series. Last year the Athletics failed to steal a base and the Cubs pilfered only one.

SPARTANS RUN WILD TO BEAT FRANKFORD

Glasgow Performs Brilliantly for Portsmouth Professional Team.

By The Associated Press

PORTSMOUTH, O., Oct. 9.—The Portsmouth Spartans chalked another game in their win column today after running roughshod over the Frankford Yellow Jackets here last night and winning 30 to 7.

Willis Glasgow, all-American halfback from Iowa, was the star of the game and captured the high-east honors when he ran 101 yards for a touchdown against the Jacks.

The long run was made on the first play of the third quarter when Glasgow received Hilleck's punt, circled back behind his own goal line, and with the aid of perfect interference ran through the entire Frankford team.

The victors made their lone marker in the initial period. They were unable to cope, however, against the star backfield quartet of Lumpkin, Wesley, Bennett and Glasgow for the rest of the game.

ECONOMY PROGRAM OUTLINED FOR NAVY

Ships To Be Taken Out of Service and Personnel Cut 4,880.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—For greater efficiency and economy the navy will decommission shortly about 120,000 tons of ships now in service and will reduce its enlisted personnel by 4,880 men.

The fleet and base shake-up initiated by Admiral William V. Pratt, who has just become chief of operations, will detach all battle ships from the Atlantic, reduce the number of destroyers in each division from six to four, create a training squadron of two battleships and eight destroyers, concentrate all mine-layers and sweepers in one force, cut the number of submarines by 25, reduce the air force and dispose of numerous miscellaneous auxiliary craft.

Most of the changes will be placed in effect during the winter maneuver off Panama.

For the fiscal year ending next June a saving of $3,440,000 is calculated and for the following year $7,758,940. The personnel reduction is to be accomplished by cutting enlistments from 400 to 200 monthly, beginning in November. The navy already has less than 84,500 men it is allowed.

BUCYRUS—Frederick Skeen has been chosen to play first clarinet in the Ohio Wesleyan band.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

One of the most common evidences of the value of educational work in selling is the argument advanced by a prospect in explaining why he prefers some other product or line to yours. How often you have recognized in such arguments the "selling talk" of your competitor - word for word! Alert advertising will guard YOUR product.

OUR INSTRUCTIONS
are

SELL!

Mr. Crawbaugh's instructions to those on the sales floor, and that, folks, is exactly what they intend to do. This great stock has now been PRICED
for IMMEDIATE LIQUIDATION by October 18. Former sale prices or former cost is no object. Nothing counts but to sell the merchandise for any prices the public will pay.

We are offering prices which you simply can not resist. Cutting prices down to where it is absolutely foolish for you not to buy. We entreat you to take full advantage of them. If there is one spark of thrift or money saving instinct in your system you will be here bright and early waiting for the doors to open at 9 o'clock.

Thundering Sea
of Bargains

Important!
Notice!

For obvious reasons some stores may attempt to undersell certain items.

Remember—

Should any of our items be placed on sale for less elsewhere they will be sold by us during this GREAT DIS-POSAL at still lower prices, regardless of our original advertised price.

Mr. Crawbaugh
Says:

"Every Person in Marion and
This Section of Ohio will Profit
by This Sale."

In this disposal sale we are offering quality hardware from our regular stocks manufactured by firms with a nation-wide reputation. We want to emphasize the importance of buying quality hardware made by dependable manufacturers. When you purchase better quality hardware you simply work an additional saving in your home through longer and more dependable service. Cheap quality articles are for short time service only and in the long run will cost you more. Now we are offering you long time service hardware at prices far below those asked for the cheapest grades of hardware.

The prices that have now been made for the wind-up of this sale will be the talk of the people of this section of Ohio for months to come. I know that this will be the largest sale ever held and I want to extend a cordial invitation to the 100,000 people in this trading territory to be here tomorrow. I am taking it upon myself to guarantee you entire satisfaction.
